We the class of 1988 dedicate this yearbook to our devoted leader, Sarah S. Cook. As we grow and develop, we will always remember the thoughts you shared with us. Thanks for your time, wisdom, and inspiration.

We wish you all the best.

A large, light gray rectangular frame is positioned in the center-right area of the image. Inside this frame, the word "Seniors" is written in a bold, black, sans-serif font. Above this frame, there is a smaller, tilted rectangular frame containing two solid black triangles pointing towards each other. Below the central frame, another tilted rectangular frame contains two more solid black triangles pointing towards each other. The background features several thin black lines forming a complex, abstract geometric pattern.

Mom, Dad and Sharon, thanks for all your love and support. I know at times it hasn't been easy. To TM, ML, LM, DW and PP the past two years would have been hell without friends like you. Peter, thanks for always being here when I need a friend.

Nursing

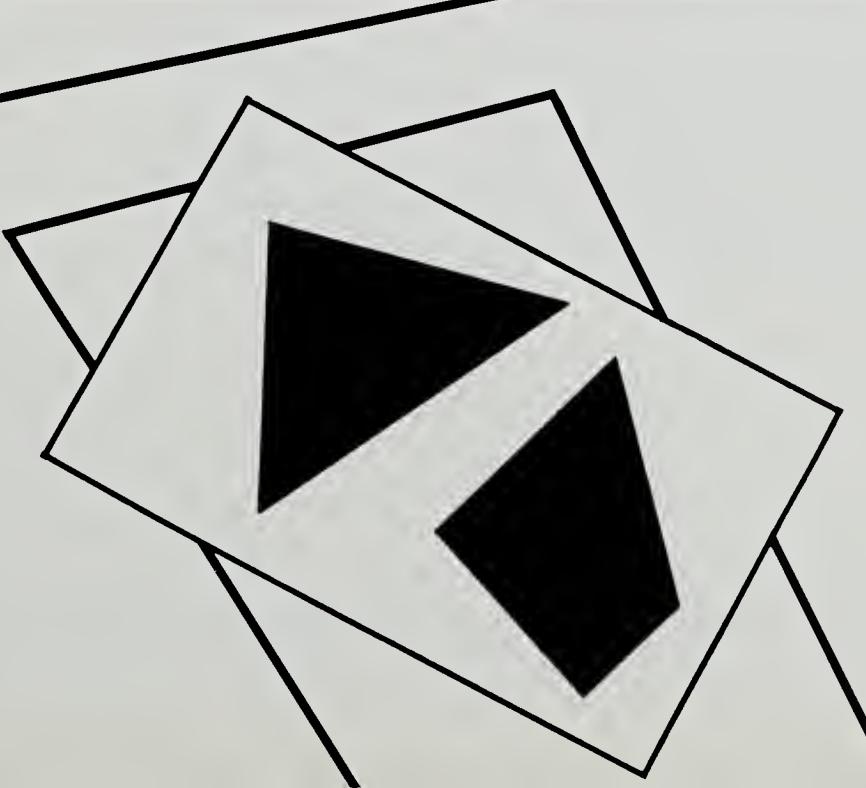

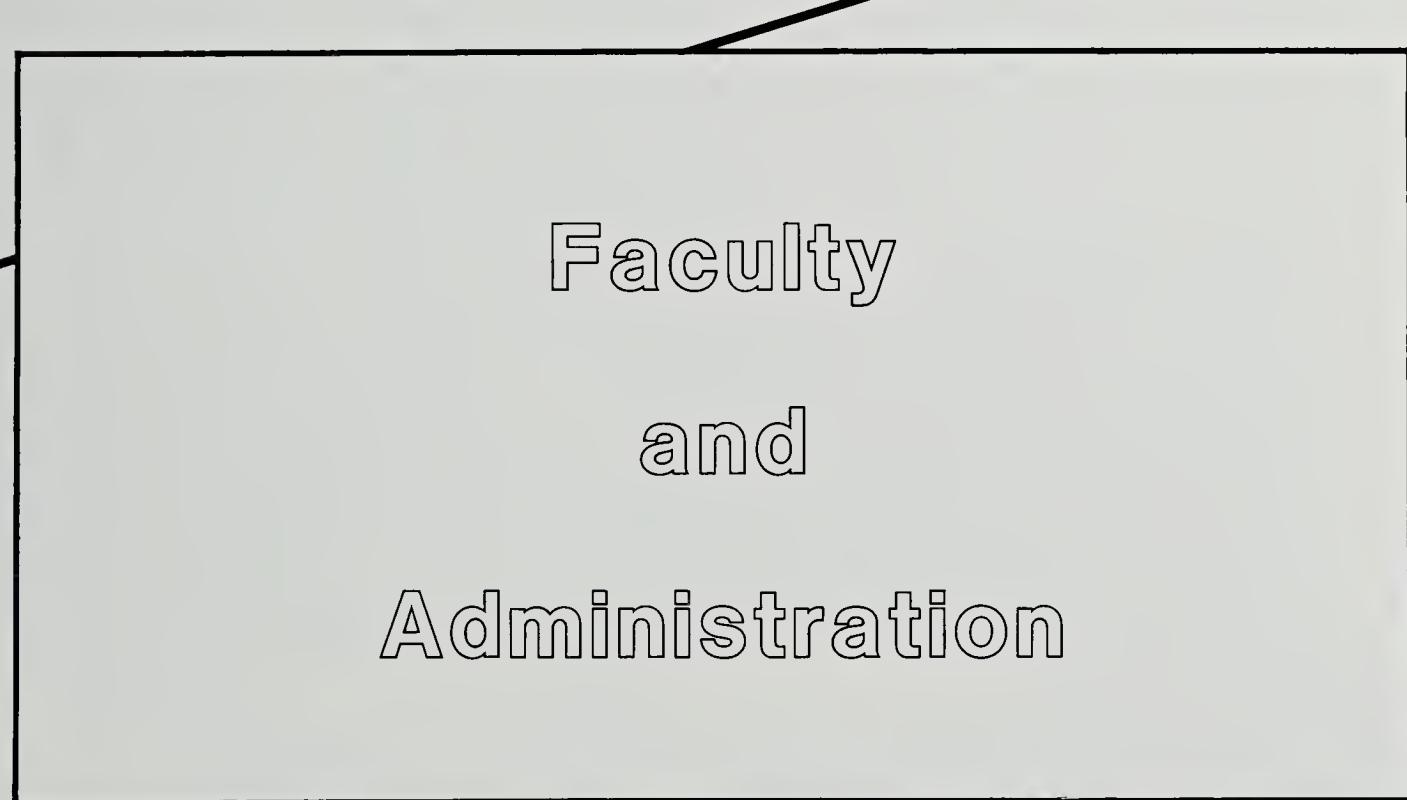

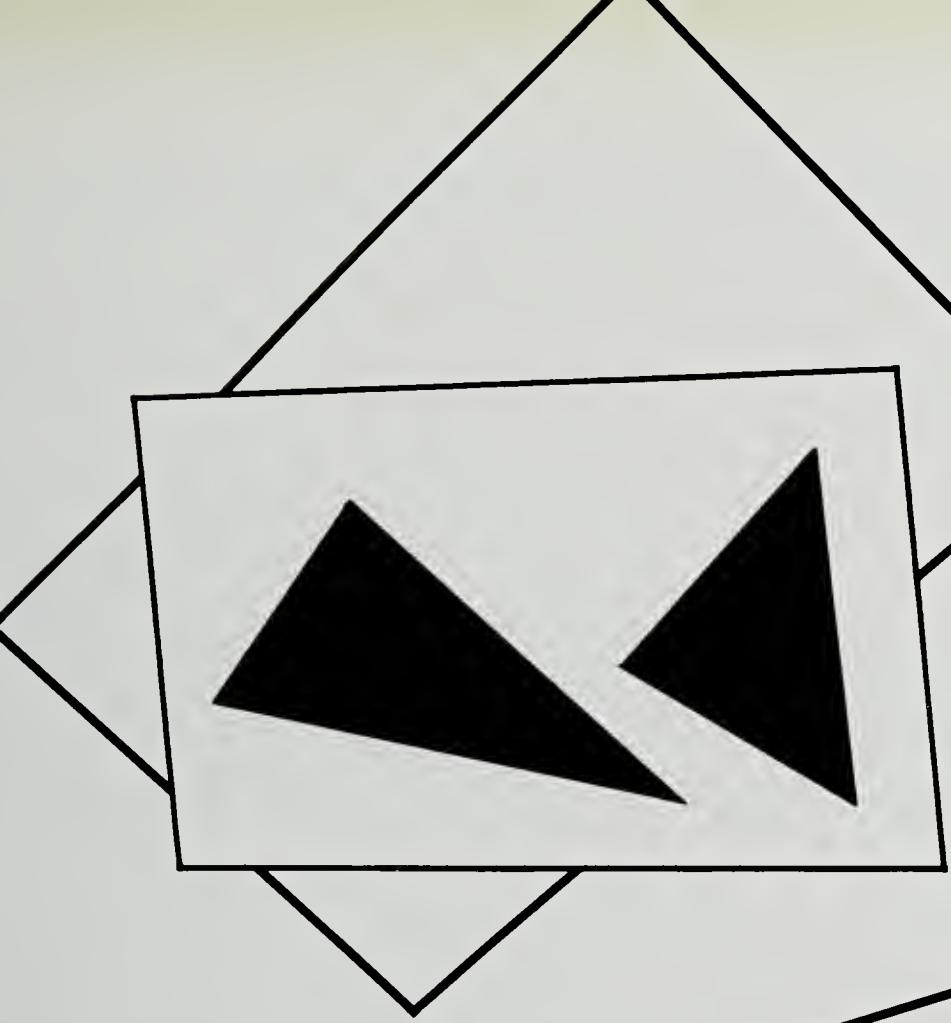

Class of '88

Nursing's story is a magnificent epic of service to mankind. It is about people: how they are born, and live and die; in health and in sickness; in joy and in sorrow. Its mission is the translation of knowledge into human service.

Nursing is compassionate concern for human beings. It is the heart that understands and the hand that soothes. It is the intellect that synthesizes many learnings into meaningful administrations.

For students of nursing the future is a rich repository of far-flung opportunities — around this planet and toward the further reaches of man's explorations of new worlds and new ideas. Theirs is the promise of deep satisfaction in a field long dedicated to serving the health needs of people.

CHALLENGE...

THAT'S WHAT IT'S ALL ABOUT AT NEW YORK CITY'S COLUMBIA-PRESBYTERIAN MEDICAL CENTER

Finally, the day you've worked so hard to reach has arrived, the day your nursing career actually begins.

There's no better place to stretch mind and skills to their fullest than The Presbyterian Hospital at Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center.

Here, you'll find yourself working with cases more challenging, more diverse than any you could have imagined.

If you're a career-oriented nurse who wants to grow, to experience all you possibly can in a stimulating teaching-learning-doing environment, then this world-renowned medical center is for you.

And, soon, you'll have the added opportunity of joining the staff of our modern, new, 300-bed community hospital, part of the Medical Center's half-billion-dollar expansion program.

Along with unique professional challenges, Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center offers such practical personal benefits as...

- A comprehensive 6-8 week orientation program with the guidance of a master-degree instructor, but with emphasis on personal self-direction.
- A Role Transformation Program to help you make the transition from academic to working life.
- 16 specialty areas, many open to new graduates.
- Inservice education on all shifts.
- Continuing education programs with generous tuition reimbursement.
- All the cultural and social activities found only in the world's most exciting city.

*To discuss your future... call Sonja Lofgren at (212) 305-7878.
